Rev. Wallace has been a member of the local observation post since it started and has served approximately 50 hours. He is one of more than 3,000 airplane spotters approved by the Army for such instruction on the Eastern Seaboard, and will return here upon its completion to instruct other observers with material supplied by the Army.

MORE RUBBER FOR RECAPPING

Owners of tires smaller than 7.50x20 will soon be able to get their casings recapped with reclaimed rubber camberback without applying to their rationing boards or certificates. This does not relax the need for continued observance of rubber conservation measures. The change was made to reduce the demand for replacement tires by encouraging recapping, which takes less than half as much reclaimed rubber as a new war tire.

V-MAIL SAFEST

More than 50,000 individual V-mail letters from American soldiers in England to relatives and friends in the U. S. were destroyed when a Canada-bound RAF plane crashed in Newfoundland. The original letters were reproduced at the Army Postal Service's V-mail station in England and dispatched by later plane for the U. S. This incident shows the value of V-mail over ordinary letters.

FEW BETHEL VOTERS INTERESTED MONDAY; LESS MONEY RAISED

Bethel voters reached a new low in town meeting attendance Monday when only 56 ballots were cast at the morning session. Even less were present in the afternoon when the articles in the warrant were acted upon at the rate of about one a minute. This speed did not prevent explanation and discussion of several matters and all who wished no doubt expressed their opinions.

All officers were elected as shown on the specimen ballot, all veterans of several years except the new member of the School Committee, Mrs. Marguerite Bartlett of East Bethel.

Appropriations followed the recommendations of the Budget Committee, although the daily pay of the Road Commissioner fell to $5.00 instead of the suggested $5.50, after the motion of Warren Blake to make it $6.00 was not seconded. The Selectmen will also receive $5.00 a day. The pay of the Tax Collector was fixed at 1%, instead of 8 mills as has been paid for some time. The motion of Miss Cleo Russell to raise the appropriation for Superintendent's salary to $850, was decidedly voted down and the recommended $600 (the usual amount) was raised. The first amount was in anticipation of a movement for increased Superintendent's salary in the school union.

Articles for State Aid road construction, advertising and Civilian Defense were passed over, there being enough funds available on hand in each case. First moving to pass over the article relating to Pine Blister Rust control. Fred Clark stated his opinion and later made the motion to raise $200 as recommended. It is understood that this amount, used with State and Federal money, will complete the work in town for a few years.

Before the meeting was adjourned, F. E. Russell suggested a "straw vote" to test the attitude of the townspeople present toward acceptance of the functions of the Corporation if the villagers decide to abolish their organization. This action required unanimous consent which was not obtained when Miss Cleo Russell voiced objections.

The Moderator appointed the following to serve on the Budget Committee next year: Fritz J. Tyler, Robert D. Hastings, Hugh D. Thurston, Harry N. Head, Fred E. Bean, D. Grover Brooks, Guy Bartlett, Fred L. Edwards, Gerard S. Williams, Adrian L. Grover, Carl L. Brown, Philip H. Chadbourne.

Officers chosen were: Moderator Fred B. Merrill, Clerk Alice J. Brooks, Selectmen Ernest F. Bisbee, John H. Howe, Carroll E. Abbott, Treasurer John M. Harrington, Collector Walter E. Bartlett, Road Comm. E. P. Brown, Member School Committee Marguerite Bartlett.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

A Non-Partisan Editorial Review of the Events of Each Week, Illustrated

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union news analysts, and not necessarily of this newspaper.

TUNISIAN TIMETABLE:
Delayed by Rommel

General Eisenhower had had his choice of fighting decisive engagements on ground offered him by Marshal Rommel or on terrain of his own choosing. That he had preferred the latter was indicated by the fact that he was not drawn into a major battle when the Nazis pushed American troops out of the Tunisian area between Sidi Bou Zid and Gafsa into the foothills bordering Tebessa, Algeria.

While the Tunisian reverse was not a catastrophe, it was nevertheless a punishing setback that meant considerable further delay in liquidating the Axis in Africa and moving on to the vastly bigger job of getting at Europe. The situation was brightened somewhat by reports that the veteran British Eighth army had rolled up from the south and had engaged Rommel's attention.

The loss of three advance airfields and three forward positions by the American forces was costly. Superior weight and mechanical equipment, plus gruelling battle experience was the explanation for the Nazi success. The new German 60-ton Mark tanks had proved too strong for the 28-ton American tanks. The Nazis, moreover, had caught the Americans with their lines too thinly held.

In Washington Secretary of War Stimson said that American forces, outnumbered and outarmed have suffered "sharp reverses and substantial casualties."

PEACE OFFENSIVE:
Axis Tries Wedge

Long expected by Allied chancelleries, the Axis peace offensive finally got under way. First feelers were extended by Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor. The next move came from Nazi Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels.

The theme of both Axis spokesmen was that the unprecedented Russian victories were as much a danger to Britain and America as to the Axis. Therefore why not a separate peace, so that Europe could be saved from the Bolshevik menace?

Quick to expose the spurious technique by which the enemy hopes to talk its way out of the consequences of impending defeat, was Elmer Davis, chief of the Office of War Information. "This pulls the whole matter into the open," he declared. "The Axis is trying to drive a wedge between Britain, the United States and their Allies."

BLACK MARKETS:
Gangsters Reap Riches

How to combat the black markets in meat products which were skyrocketing retail prices, menacing the supply for military and lend-lease purposes and endangering the future existence of small packers was a problem that had congress as well as agricultural officials worried.

As reports persisted that gangsters had turned their unscrupulous talents into this highly profitable illegal trade, two suggestions were made by the OPA to the house small business committee, for solving the problem. One was for the government to purchase live animals. The other was for a registration of all who handle meat.

OPA investigators, it was learned, had uncovered strong indications that one-time allies of gangster chief Al Capone had been dabbling in meat, sugar and coffee. In one eastern city it was said that one-third of meat sold over retail counters had been slaughtered illegally.

A wounded U. S. soldier struck during a heavy air attack by German planes on the airfield at Souk el Arba in Algeria is shown being comforted by a comrade-in-arms. The airfield was originally captured by U. S. paratroopers.

FRENCH ARMADA:
To Strengthen Allies

Heartening news that 42 French warships, in addition to the four now undergoing repairs in American shipyards, would soon be fighting on the side of the United Nations was brought out by Vice Admiral Raymond Fenard, chief of the French naval mission to the United States.

Admiral Fenard said that two more battleships, six cruisers, an aircraft carrier, seven destroyers, 14 submarines and ten auxiliary craft would join the United Nations armada "soon, but I don't know when."

The naval leader said that the cruisers Gloire and Georges Leygues already are in action against the Axis.

CANNED MEAT:
Temporary Freeze

Making supplies of canned meats and canned fish last through the year was a problem causing many a headache in the Office of Food Administration. Stocks on dealers' shelves had dwindled ominously; housewives were on a buying spree. Result: the OPA suspended sales of canned salmon, tuna, shrimp, meat spreads and kindred products until at least March 28—the date on which meat rationing was expected to begin.

Meanwhile, housewives and corner grocers had begun to familiarize themselves with the point-rationing system governing the sale of canned fruits and vegetables, dried fruits, canned soups and canned baby foods.

Still unrationed were fish and meat products sold in frozen form such as quick-freeze lobster, and canned products not sealed or sterilized by the use of heat. Pickled pigs feet and dried beef were examples of the latter.

RACE FOR DNIEPER:
Nazis Still Menaced

Only two natural defense lines in the flat farm areas of southern Russia were left open to the Nazi armies after the victorious Russian forces had swept rapidly westward following the fall of Rostov and Kharkov. These were the Dnieper river in the central Ukraine, and behind it the Dniester river on the Rumanian border.

Even if Hitler's armies won the race to the Dnieper river and succeeded in establishing a new winter line behind its mile-wide expanse, the Nazi problems were by no means solved. The Nazi southern flank in the Crimea would be exposed and difficult to hold. The northern flank west of Leningrad would likewise be in jeopardy.

In an effort to convert the German retreat westward into a disorderly rout, the Red army had pounded ahead in a knockout offensive aimed at Orel, Nazi anchor point below Moscow. Strategic junction of four railroads, Orel provided direct communications between north Russia and the central Ukraine on the trunk rail line between Moscow and Orel.

As the Reds continued to push the Nazis out of the eastern and northern regions of the Donets river, Nazi resistance had stiffened inside the river basin itself.

INFLATION:
Taxation the Remedy

Hard-headed Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve board of governors, bluntly warned congress that the nation faced disastrous inflation because the government is financing too much of its war deficit by bank borrowing and not enough by taxation and public borrowing.

Asserting that the government was doing a "very bad" job of war financing by comparison with other countries, Mr. Eccles said the problem of inflation was "entirely in the hands of congress."

"No government in a war period has been able to avoid some inflation," he said, adding that "inflation can only come by congress appropriating money and failing to provide method of collecting money."

Purchasing power this year, he estimated, would be 40 billion dollars in excess of goods and services available. If the public saved in the same proportion as in 1942, however, he said the gap would be shaved down to about 15 billion.

DRAFT:
'Undesirables' Next?

As it became clear that congressional sentiment was preponderantly in favor of deferring fathers and others with dependents until the supply of single men was completely exhausted, somber predictions on the future quality of draftees were made by army spokesmen.

Brig. Gen. Miller G. White warned that deferment for fathers of draft age would make it necessary for the army to induct illiterates, men with venereal diseases and "undesirables" now accepted only in limited numbers.

The rapidity with which the nation's armed forces are being built up was indicated by a statement by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, head of the selective service system, that a total of 28,000 men per day are being taken into the army and navy at present induction rates.

STEEL CAPACITY:
Millions for Stepup

Steel companies have met the wartime challenge of greater output by spending nearly a billion and a quarter of their money to increase production and efficiency since 1938, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced.

One-third of this sum was spent in the first three years of war, but after Pearl Harbor, expenditures were stepped up. From 1941 through 1943, the institute said, the industry spent or prepared to spend about $773,000,000.

Present expansion projects will increase blast furnace capacities 20 per cent; open hearth 18 per cent; and electric furnace nearly 350 per cent.

BRITISH SHOWDOWN:
On Beveridge Plan

Prime Minister Churchill's position as Britain's war leader was in no wise jeopardized, but the Labor party's vigorous protest over his government's lukewarm attitude on the Beveridge social security plan had precipitated a domestic crisis. Labor leaders were determined to force the government to accept the Beveridge plan more fully and take steps to make it workable. The labor party had been sorely dissatisfied with what it regarded as the government's delaying tactics.

FASTEST PLANE:
Unveiled by Navy

When the navy unveiled what was termed the "fastest airplane in the United States" at a Hartford, Conn., plane factory, it was disclosed that other models of this ship—the Vought F4U Corsair—had already been in successful action against the Japs over Munda in the South Pacific.

Among the "bests" claimed in the Corsair's behalf were that it has the most powerful engine of any navy fighter in the world; that it can outfight and outfly land based aircraft in the same classification; that it can be used as an interceptor.

JAP WAR THEATER:
Mme. Chiang Urges Speed

Even as Madame Chiang Kai-shek in Washington was calling for more decisive Allied blows against Japan, communiques from China revealed that the Japs had undertaken what was apparently a major effort to knock China out of the war.

The Jap offensive took the form of attacks in seven Chinese areas from above Shanghai to Yunnan in the Southwest. The core of the drive had been directed along the old Burma road in Southwest Yunnan.

Seeking to stir America to a greater understanding of Japan's menace to the Allies, Madame Chiang said

MME. CHIANG KAI-SHEK Urges speedy aid to China.

It was contrary to the United Nations' interests to allow Japan "to continue not only as a potential enemy, but as a waiting sword of Damocles, ready to descend at a moment's notice."

Reports from Allied Pacific headquarters continued to reflect steady, if undramatic progress. In New Guinea, American and Australian jungle troops were pushing hard on the heels of Japs retreating from the Wau area toward Mubo on the outskirts of Salamau. In the air Liberators and Flying Fortress bombers continued attacks on Jap positions in Dutch New Guinea and New Britain.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: Col. Bernt Balchen, New York, famous for his Arctic exploits and now a member of the army air corps, has been awarded the Soldier's medal and Oak Leaf cluster, the war department announced. Balchen participated with two navy fliers in the rescue last June of a Flying Fortress crew in Greenland that had suffered a wilderness crackup.

NEW YORK: The campus and buildings of what was formerly Hunter College in the Bronx have now been completely occupied by WAVES and SPARS who are training here at the navy's newest and largest center for these auxiliary enlistees. Capt. William F. Amsden, U.S.N., is supervising the young women's "boot" training. When enrollment is completed more than 6,000 WAVES and SPARS will be on deck. Quarters are in 13 apartment buildings near the campus which were vacated by their civilian occupants.

CANBERRA: The Australian commonwealth issued a proclamation according the United States most favored nation treatment on tariffs. This action was taken without formal request from the United States. R. V. Keane, minister of trade and customs, said: "It is wrong that our principal ally, who has given us great material assistance, should remain on the punitive general tariff."

LONDON: Britain will need at least 500,000 helpers for harvesting this year's crop and if they are not available on a voluntary basis, they will have to be conscripted, Minister of Agriculture R. S. Hudson declared. Last year, he said, Britain had 650 harvest camps and this year it is hoped there will be more than 1,000. "We want at least 300,000 school children, 50,000 older students and between 150,000 and 200,000 adults," he added. The alternative to a satisfactory harvest, he said, would be prolongation of the war and an acute food shortage.

THE STORY SO FAR: Old Bill Cole, having been fatally shot by an unknown assailant, made two identical wills, leaving all his money and the King Cole Ranch to Ann Lee and to Cole Cody, children of his two old cronies, Rusty Lee and Buck Cody. Rance Waldron, who claimed relationship, appeared at the Ranch just prior to Old Bill's death. Meanwhile, Ann and Cole were on their way to the Ranch by stage coach. Long Peters, the stage driver, was shot through the arm during a hold-up, so Cole Cody took his place on the driver's seat where he was joined by Ann. Finally they arrived at Bald Eagle, where Cody met Porfirio Lopez.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

Porfirio snatched up his glass.

"We drink together, you and me, Senor Codito! To one great gentleman! To one of the soldiers of the good God Himself! To Don Senor Early Bill Cole! To Don Senor Early Bill Cole! To him, forever and ever, 'Salud y pesetas!' To Don Senor Early Bill Cole!"

Then Cole Cody, forgetting other things, gripped him by the thin shoulders.

"What are you talking about?" he demanded sharply. "Early Bill Cole? Of the King Cole Ranch? You say he is dead?"

"Only two days ago, Don Codito." "But I had a letter from him, Porfirio, only a few days ago! And dead now!"

Here was news! Cole Cody stood frowning at nothing, telling himself that all along this had been a funny howdy-do: First the letter from old Early Bill, which he had been utterly unable to explain; now the violent removal of the only man who could tell him. Well, he'd go to the hotel over night, then in the morning turn tail and leave Bald Eagle and a lot of unanswered questions behind him. Along with a girl he never wanted to see again.

He lifted his glass. "We drink together to Don Senor Early Bill Cole!" cried little Porfirio, and snatched off his hat. "The two of us together."

Cody politely removed his own hat and the two drank together. Then, with that darting swiftness so characteristic of him, Porfirio snatched Cody's glass and tapped it gently with the haft of his evil-looking knife, rendering it into splintered fragments. Before the bartender could bear down on him he had repeated the performance with his own glass.

"Hey, you can't do that!" Porfirio slammed down a ten dollar gold coin.

"I pay for the glasses and for the drinks too, Senor," he said.

It was far too early for bed, so Cody and Porfirio Lopez dawdled over their supper in one of Bald Eagle's little restaurants for the better part of an hour, and thereafter set out to see the town. Cody was about to call it a night and go off to bed when he was accosted by a lean and wiry old man with a mane of snowy hair and a mammoth, unpruned white mustache, with a broad and battered old black hat and sleek high-heeled boots and a long-tailed black coat. None other, in fact, than Mr. Arthur Henry Pope—the Judge.

"Mr. William Cole Cody, I believe?" he said sonorously.

"That's my name, sir," he said.

"And I, sir, am Arthur Henry Pope. I know something about you; not much, but something. I'd like a few words with you, Mr. Cody," said the Judge. "In private."

"What is it?" asked Cody.

"I have taken a room for you at the hotel where you'll want to stay overnight. Will you step over with me?"

"I'm with a friend—"

"The matter is of importance. Also of an entirely private nature—"

"Go 'long with him, Don Codito," said Porfirio, and began a discreet withdrawal. "He is a man they call the Judge here. He is all right, you will see, because they tell me he was a very good friend of Don Senor Early Bill Cole." Then Porfirio bolted, headed for the bar, again flourishing his colorful bandana.

"Certainly," agreed Cody, his curiosity now riding high, and the two went out together.

A bit earlier in the evening, the Judge and Doc Joe having a few moments together on their porch after Doc Joe had tinkered with his new patients as best he could and got them off to their beds, the Judge had been led to remark with a snort,

"Old Early Bill, confound his ornery hide, having sworn by all that was good and holy he'd get him his fun after he was dead, ought to be laughing his fool head off now!"

In his turn Doc Joe had snorted. "The fools were you and me, Judge," he growled. "Two softies, a couple of mush-headed sissies. We ought to have stood up on our hind legs and told him to go to the devil."

All this was because before his demise old Early Bill had instructed this precious duo, laying down the law to them and exacting their promises to carry out his bidding. If he died before his "heirs" arrived, the Judge and Doc Joe were to look out for the two, and were to tell them just as much as Early Bill wanted told, not a single syllable more. Doc Joe was to explain matters to the girl, the Judge was to do likewise for young Cody. And they were not unduly to stick their noses into subsequent happenings. "Let nature take its course!" old King Cole had chuckled.

And now the Judge and Doc Joe, having in due course learned that both Cole Cody and Ann Lee were on the stage, were faithfully if irreverently carrying out orders.

Thus, while Doc Joe was expounding to a round-eyed, breathless girl and her quietly attentive Aunt Jennifer in one room of the Bald Eagle Hotel, the Judge was letting head and ears of the cat out of the bag for the astounding of William Cole Cody in another room.

"And that's the way of it," concluded Doc Joe, glad to be at the end of the crazy business, and opened a carpet-bag at his feet, took from it an old iron box from which long ago the black paint had scaled, and set it down on Miss Ann Lee's knees.

"But—but—" the girl spluttered. "I can't understand it! This Mr. Early Bill Cole you are talking about—Why, I don't know him! I never saw him even, in my life! I never heard of him! Of course, Doctor, there is some mistake. It must be some other girl—some other girl, maybe, named Lee. Maybe even named—"

"There may be a lot of mistakes in this whole deal," the old doctor grunted, "but that's not one of them. You're the girl all right—Say, haven't you got the key?"

"The key! Why, of course I have!" She jumped up, the box in her hands, and ran to the walnut bureau; she pulled and tugged until she got the top-sided top drawer open and extracted her purse. "Here is the key! He sent it to me with a letter that made me terribly curious, saying some things, half-saying some, leaving out the things I was dying to know!"

"That would be old Early Bill for you," said Doc Joe tartly. "And I reckon that's the key all right. You might try it."

She got the key in one of the locks. It fitted! It turned easily.

"It is the right key!" she exclaimed, and tried it in the other lock. She withdrew the key, looked at it, stooped over the box again, tossing her head impatiently to throw the hair back from falling over her eyes. "Something's the matter with the crazy thing," she said, baffled. "Will you try it, Doctor?"

He shook his head. "No use, Miss Ann. One thing I didn't tell you. Your key fits only one of the two locks. There's another key. It—ahem!—it's being kept by someone else. A man that old Early Bill trusted it to. You can't open your box until he shows up."

"Why, isn't that funny! Who is this man? Is he here in Bald Eagle?"

He shook his head, ready to go.

"Come to me later, if you want to," he said. "I'm hoping that things will work out all right for you. Maybe they will. That's what that infernal old devil wanted."

Upon its gentle knell, its white-washed adobe walls a snowy, gleaming white in the distance under the eastern sun, the old Casa of the Estradas, the home for many a year of Bill Cole of King Cole Ranch, was like an alabaster palace out of a fairy tale.

The low, massive building was surrounded by a wall akin in construction to itself, a wall of adobe, white-washed, topped with warm red tiles. Ann Lee, leading the way, her carpet-bag containing the precious iron box caught tight under her arm, threw open a gate and hurried along one of the paths radiating from the old home. And Aunt Jennifer, her cheeks almost as pink as forbidding. But that was only because all the shades had been drawn down and it was dark in here after the sunshine outside. He said pleasantly, "Just a second and we'll have some light in," and went to one window after another flipping up the shades. The sunlight streamed in joyously; of a sudden, with the dark put to flight, it became a genial and friendly room.

And now they could see Rance Waldron clearly.

"I am Ann Lee and this is my Aunt, Miss Jennifer Edwards. We had an invitation from—Mr. William Cole to visit him here. We got to Bald Eagle only last night and now—Well," and she too smiled faintly, "here we are!"

"I am taking care of things right now," he said. "I was lucky to get here just before my uncle died."

"Your uncle?" spoke up Aunt Jennifer. "Old Bill Cole was your uncle?"

Rance made a little deprecatory gesture.

"I've always called him that," he said easily. "Not an uncle exactly, but related. I am, I believe, his next of kin; his only kinsman, in fact. I am Rance Waldron; my mother and the old man were cousins. It's because of that," and he lifted his broad shoulders in the hint of a shrug, "that I am staying on here. Unless there is a will, and I don't believe he ever made a will, I suppose I am the next owner here."

At the mention of a will, Ann's lips were parted to speak up, but by the time he had added a final clause she had become conscious of Aunt Jennifer's eyes stabbing warningly at her.

Aunt Jennifer said, "It's a mighty nice place out here. He wanted us to visit him for a while. We've come a long way, too, over a hundred miles. We got to town last night on the stage."

What she was driving at was obvious enough, and there didn't seem very much he could do about it. Had it just been the older woman alone, Rance Waldron might have been the man for putting her off bodily; his eyes, however, quitted her face while she was still speaking and drifted, openly admiring, to Ann's. He said with a semblance of heartiness,

"Well, the thing that counts is that you're here now! And I am glad that I happened to be on hand to welcome you in my uncle's place. And I'll bet you haven't even had breakfast yet. I know I haven't."

"Will you show me the way to the kitchen?" asked Aunt Jennifer. "I'll be glad to get breakfast for you."

"Say, that's great!" said Rance.

He showed them the kitchen, a room big enough for a barn, with an enormous cook stove which Early Bill had had installed here many a year ago and which had had scant use for a dozen years, and there were ample provisions.

"Now," said Aunt Jennifer, sleeves rolled back on a pair of pretty, white arms and a clean sugar sack pinned about her waist, "you can skedaddle and I'll call you when things are ready."

"Fair enough," said Rance. "I'll go clean up a speck; haven't even washed my face or combed my hair yet!" And he hurried away; they heard his boots echoing through the big rooms with their bare floors and few scatter rugs; they heard a door close, then, from some farther room, another door.

"You take mighty good care of that box, Miss Ann," he said hurriedly.

When will he give me the other key?"

Doc Joe was already edging toward the door.

"You take mighty good care of that box, Miss Ann," he said hurriedly. "Just you remember that it's worth a power of money! The whole King Cole Ranch is in there—a heap of gold and greenbacks besides! Just you take mighty good care of it, Miss Ann. And now, good night to you, Miss. And to you also, Miss Jennifer," he said, and ducked out and fled.

And in that other room under the same roof the Judge had finished imparting to young Cody all the facts in the case which he had been authorized to make fairly clear. Cody had heard him out in silence, his eyes dark between narrowed lids, his face stilled to expressionlessness. And when the Judge, too, grew silent Cody still sat on a moment or two, pondering.

"Thanks, Judge," he said. "I guess that's all you've got to tell me? Wouldn't do much good to start asking questions?" The Judge rather liked him for that.

They entered just a trifle hesitantly, the house was so dark and, at the moment, somehow sinister and

STAGE SCREEN RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

IT WON'T be surprising if Metro refuses to cast its male stars in martial roles, after what's been happening there. Clark Gable's last appearance before the cameras, in "Somewhere I'll Find You," had a closing sequence in which he was all mixed up in the war—and next thing we knew he'd signed up. Richard Quine was a draftee in "For Me and My Gal"—then became one. Richard Ney went into military service right after he played an army inductee in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley." And Robert Taylor, a naval lieutenant in "Stand By for Action," set about becoming a lieutenant (jg) in the naval air force as soon as he'd finished the picture.

To the red caps at Pennsylvania Station in New York celebrities are an old story, but when Pat O'Brien of RKO's "Bombardier" arrived they instantly turned autograph hunters. And you should have heard the drivers in the taxi queue shout "Hello, Pat!"

Rita Hayworth has been having her troubles, all because Victor Mature gave her a dog. Because of gas rationing she sublet her house and took an apartment nearer the Columbia studio. But when she arrived there, with her baggage and "Genius," the bulldog, the owner wouldn't let her move in; said dogs weren't admitted, and refused to break the rule for Rita's.

"Vox Pop," granddaddy of audience-participation in radio, is now in first place among this type of half-hour shows in the Crossley survey report; it is followed by "Take It or Leave It," "Truth or Consequences" and "Information, Please" in the order named.

Music by George Jessell, Ben Oakland and Red Grouya will be heard in "Cinderella Swings It," the next picture of the "Scattergood" series, starring Guy Kibbee. An augmented chorus supports Gloria Warren when she sings these new songs.

Hal Peary's recent singing stints on "The Great Gildersleeve" radio series have convinced RKO that the actor ought to do a vocal sequence in his next picture, "Gildersleeve's Bad Boy."

ODDS AND ENDS—The day that Carl Esmond went to complete preparations for becoming a United States citizen, the Finnish actor wound up at Columbia playing a Nazi major in "Attack by Night." ... Women in defense industries are flooding NBC with requests that Mary Margaret McBride switch her daytime show to the night lanes. ... Sam "Schlepperman" Hearn, of Jack Benny's traveling company, has played 32 army camps this season, often giving two or three performances. ... Columbia picked sixteen of the country's finest dancers for the chorus of its new "Redhead From Manhattan," which stars Lupe Vélez.

Portable Stand for Your Mending Made From Phonograph Cabinet Lid

HERE the lid of a reclaimed phonograph cabinet is turned upside down and screwed to a wooden box to make a portable container for your mending. Half the time required for mending is usually taken up in getting everything together at a convenient time.

If you can't find a pair of old metal drawer handles there are many designs at the dime stores made of composition and wood. The lid may be painted or stained as desired and the box will be masked by the full skirt tacked to the under part of the lid edge. If you wish to line the upper part, cut pieces of cardboard to fit the sides and bottom. Cover these with chintz; add a strip of belting ribbon to the side sections, catching it down to make holders for equipment; then glue the sections in place.

NOTE: If you missed the article which illustrated how the body of the phonograph cabinet was used, it is contained in BOOK 9, together with thirty-one other conservation plans. Copy of BOOK 9 will be sent to you for 15 cents in coins. Address:

Our Monroe Doctrine

In the days of President Monroe there was considerable apprehension that European interests might so interfere with South American states as to menace the security of the U. S. So Monroe declared that, in the American continents, any attempt to exploit any territory for European colonization would be held an unfriendly act.

Spain was the country directly concerned, because of the South American Spanish colonies that had revolted. It was feared that Spain might transfer her claims to a "Stronger Power."

So the Monroe Doctrine has come to mean that Europe must never interfere in the continents of North and South America.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Fish Is Flavorful

One very direct and effective way of meeting the meat shortage is by serving fish in its many delectable ways. Few families have been initiated into the many ways of preparation for fish, few know how succulent are their steaks when baked, or how tart and crisp are fillets when fried.

Bones have been removed from many types of fish so this need concern the cook little. If they have not already been removed, this can be done easily since they are usually together.

French Fried Fish Fillets.
Desired number and kind of fish fillets
1 egg, well beaten with 1 tablespoon water Crumbs, corn meal, flour or potato meal
Salt and pepper
Salad oil for frying

Wash fillets in cold water, drain on absorbent paper. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; dip first in dry coating—(crumbs or other if preferred), then in egg mixture and again in dry coating. Place in deep salad oil—(375 to 385 degrees)—or hot enough to brown a 1-inch cube of bread in 40 to 50 seconds.

Fish is good when baked—especially with tomatoes and green pepper:

Baked Whitefish, Creole.
(Serves 5 to 6)
2½ pounds whitefish, cleaned and boned
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, chopped
¼ cup green pepper, chopped
1 tablespoon flour
1½ cups tomato soup
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Place fish in greased baking dish, skin side down. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and brush with one tablespoon of the melted butter. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 15 minutes. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in saucepan and add chopped onion and green pepper. Simmer five minutes. Add flour and blend thoroughly. Then add tomato soup, salt and Worcestershire sauce. Cook until mixture thickens, then pour it over the partially baked whitefish. Return to oven for 20 minutes more or until fish flakes easily.

Lynn Says:

Sauces for Fish: They're a must with fish because they make it most delicious dish. You'll like browned butter with lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce.
Or, just cream the butter and season with lemon juice.

Horseradish is popular with fish. Take ½ cup drained, prepared horseradish, season with salt and pepper and one tablespoon vinegar, then fold in ½ cup of whipped cream.

Tartar is not just another name for sauce, it's an affinity with fish fillets. Make it by adding 1 teaspoon minced onion, 2 teaspoons chopped, sweet pickle, 1 teaspoon chopped green olives, and 1 tablespoon vinegar to ¼ cup mayonnaise.

Make a cup of medium-thick white sauce and add to this ½ cup grated cheese and let the cheese melt. Or, 2 chopped, hard-boiled eggs added to white sauce, make a golden crown for baked or fried fish.

Halibut is another good, substantial dish. Mild in flavor, it needs a tart sauce to pick up its delicate flavors:

Halibut Steaks.
Have center cut slices of halibut steak cut one inch thick, salt and pepper them and dredge lightly with flour. Fry to a light brown in butter. Remove to a platter and cover with sliced sauteed mushrooms, using about a pound for 2 steaks. Over this pour the following sauce:

Stew 1 No. 2 can of tomatoes with 1 cup of chopped celery, ½ chopped green pepper and 1 large chopped onion. When vegetables are tender,
run all through a coarse sieve. Into this melt ¼ pound
of grated cheese,
1 tablespoon of butter, and salt and pepper to taste.
Heat fish thoroughly in oven and just before serving sprinkle with cheese and run under flame to brown.

There's distinction in salmon when it's combined with discreet seasoning—lemon juice and tomato:

Baked Salmon Slices.
Salmon cut in individual servings
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 onion
1 tomato Bacon strips

Brush slices of fish on both sides with the oil. Place in a baking dish, sprinkle with the lemon juice, salt and pepper. Then lay a thin slice of onion on each piece. Cover onion with a ¼-inch slice of tomato and top with a strip of bacon cut in two. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45 minutes.

Salmon Fondue.
(Serves 6)
5 slices bread
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup flaked, cooked salmon
3 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup grated American cheese

Trim crusts from bread and cut into ½-inch cubes. Heat milk in double boiler, add bread cubes, butter, liquid from salmon, and well-beaten egg yolks. Season with salt and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in cheese. Cool for 10 to 15 minutes. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into mixture. Pour into greased baking dish. Place dish in pan of warm water and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 1 hour or until a knife when inserted comes out clean.

Note: Chopped shrimp, flaked tuna or minced clams or oysters may be used in place of the salmon.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber ball sports, baseball, football, tennis, etc., really had their beginning back in the 16th century. Someone has reported that in 1520 Emperor Montezuma entertained Cortez and his soldiers in Mexico City with a game played with rubber balls.
Overloading and over-inflation are two rubber wailing practices most common with motor truck operators.
Plantation rubber had its beginning in 1876 when Henry Wickham had planted in the Kew Botanic Gardens in London some of the 7,000 Hevea brasiliensis seeds he had smuggled out of the jungles of Brazil. A few years later trees were transplanted to the Far East.
A car traveling on packed snow at 20 mph when braked will travel 79 feet before coming to a stop if it is not equipped with anti-skid chains on the rear wheels. Attachment of chains will stop the car traveling under the same conditions in 40 feet.
